

Abstract of the Disclosure

In a system for a material testing machine, a computer attached to a material testing machine is connected to an outside provider, and test information by the material testing machine is periodically sent from the computer to a web site to update the information. By accessing the web site from any cellular phone or another personal computer, test status or test result by the material testing machine can be checked at any place. Accordingly, without forming a large-scaled system, the test status or the like by the material testing machine can be obtained while an operator is far away from the material testing machine.